HAITIAN REVOLUTION

ABOUT

Saint Domingue and the Expulsion of the British

After significant inroads into Saint Domingue, partially aided by arming the enslaved in their occupied territory, the British faced the consequences of disease and defections to the French side. Although they had moved all the way down the Artibonite Valley to Mirebalais, they soon lost to Louverture in Archaie and St. Marc and, after negotiating directly with Louverture himself, evacuated their troops from their western coastal strongholds.
